- a. SFMTA Presenting Active Communities Plan
i. Presenters: Christine Osorio, SFMTA Transportation Planner

Christy Osorio presented their presentation on the SFMTA's Active Communities Plan, which is now called "San Francisco's Biking and Rolling Plan".

Vice Chair Fong asked if they have a number of how many San Franciscans currently take active transit compared to the goal of 80%, to which Osorio said that 16% currently use active transit. Fong asked if they know where the higher quality projects will be located throughout the City, to which Osorio said they are currently mostly concentrated in downtown and parks and want to expand it to ensure they're equitably accessible. Fong asked how they intend to mend the social divide between the car-reliant and bike-reliant communities, to which Osorio said that because the biggest criticism has been the lack of community input and that they've implemented plans to double down on listening to the communities that are the most concerned about SFMTA's plans with moving forward on projects that directly affect them.

Chair Ansari asked what the Youth Commission can do to help support this plan, which Osorio said that they want to center this plan around students. Osorio said that they want to make sure that their Safe Pathways to School program expands, and that they'll be at schools in April for feedback on how to make traveling to school safer for students. Vice Chair Fong responded by saying that there's a lot of potential changes that could help students want to take active modes of transit instead of driving.
